

Zahid's Artist Engagement Toolkit - for his upcoming US Visit

Zahid Rajper — Short Bio

Zahid Rajper is a Pakistani multidisciplinary artist, poet, writer, and art director from Khairpur, Sindh. Rooted in Sindhi language, Indus Valley heritage, and the struggles of ordinary life, his work explores memory, identity, social justice, climate concerns, water rights, and the dignity of marginalized communities.

He studied Art & Design and earned a Bachelor of Arts from Shah Abdul Latif University, Khairpur. He has worked with Audio Lab Pakistan and Sindh TV in art direction, music selection, and creative production. His exhibitions and presentations include Karachi Arts Council, Pakistan National Council of Arts, Shah Abdul Latif University Khairpur, Khairpur Arts Council, World Sindhi Congress 2024, and the Sindhi Association of North America, Houston 2025.

Zahid is also the author of Sada, a Sindhi poetry collection published in 2002, with selected poetry translated internationally. He is preparing for new exhibitions, gallery engagements, and artistic collaborations in the United States.

Zahid Rajper - Long Profile / website about page profile

Zahid Rajper is a multidisciplinary visual artist, poet, writer, and art director from Sindh, Pakistan. Born in the rural district of Khairpur, his creative journey is deeply shaped by the land, language, traditions, struggles, and emotional memory of Sindhi society. His work carries the voice of Sindhi language, the depth of Indus Valley roots, and the lived experience of ordinary people whose stories often remain outside mainstream cultural spaces.

Zahid's artistic path is grounded in both creative training and social observation. He holds an Associate Degree in Art & Design and a Bachelor of Arts from Shah Abdul Latif University, Khairpur. His academic and creative background has helped shape a practice that is not limited to visual form alone, but also engages with society, culture, language, history, and human struggle.

His work as a visual artist reflects the landscape and memory of Sindh while speaking to wider human concerns. His paintings, poetry and creative projects often explore Sindhi identity, rural life, migration, climate change, water rights, social justice, love, loss, resistance, and the dignity of common people. The colors, figures, symbols, and emotional textures in his work are connected to the soil of Sindh, but the feelings they carry are universal.

Zahid does not separate image from word. As a poet and writer, he brings language into his visual practice, allowing poetry, memory, and social reflection to inform his paintings and concepts. His creative process often begins with a word, a line of poetry, a social concern, or a remembered image from daily life. From there, it becomes a painting, a visual idea, a written piece, or a collaborative artistic direction.

Alongside his work as a visual artist, Zahid has contributed significantly to Sindhi poetry, writing, music-related creative projects, and art direction. He has worked as Art Director at Audio Lab Pakistan, where he contributed to music selection, music composition, and the visual direction of creative projects. He has also worked with Sindh TV in art direction, strengthening his experience in visual storytelling across media. His creative collaborations include work connected with Sindhi music and cultural projects, where his role has included poetry, central idea, concept development, art direction, and visual selection. These contributions show his ability to move between poetry, sound, image, and visual narrative.

Zahid is also an active writer whose voice has addressed climate change, water rights, and social justice for marginalized communities. During Pakistan's difficult political period of martial law in the early 2000s, he wrote articles for Khabrain Group, engaging with issues of public concern at a time when speaking openly required courage and conviction. His writing continues to reflect his commitment to people, water crises, land justice, and cultural memory.

As a published poet, Zahid's literary work has reached readers in Sindhi and through translation. His Sindhi poetry book Sada was published in 2002 by Sambara Academy. His selected poetry was later translated by Qadir Ansari and published as Melan Chony by Sindhi Sangat United Kingdom in 2008. Another translation of his selected poetry, Black Banded Time, translated by Ibrahim Khokhar, is currently in the publishing process with SCALA Canada.

Zahid's visual work has been exhibited and presented at important cultural and artistic spaces, including Karachi Arts Council, Pakistan National Council of Arts, Shah Abdul Latif University Khairpur, Khairpur Arts Council, World Sindhi Congress 2024, and the Sindhi Association of North America, Houston 2025. These platforms reflect his growing engagement with audiences in Pakistan and the Sindhi diaspora.

During his upcoming visit to the United States, Zahid seeks to connect with galleries, curators, artists, studios, universities, cultural organizations, and community art spaces. He is open to solo exhibitions, group shows, artist talks, studio visits, collaborative projects, poetry and visual art programs, cultural presentations, and cross-cultural creative exchange.

His work speaks from Sindh, but it reaches beyond one geography. At its heart, Zahid Rajper's art is about memory, language, resistance, belonging, and the human stories carried by land, people, and time.

Professional Profile Layout for Website (put this below the long profile on about page)

Name

Zahid Rajper

Professional Title

Multidisciplinary Artist | Visual Artist | Poet | Writer | Art Director | Conceptual Director

Based In

Sindh, Pakistan / (...)

Born

Khairpur District, Sindh, Pakistan

Year of birth: (...)

Education

Bachelor of Arts

Shah Abdul Latif University, Khairpur Year: (...)

Associate Degree in Art & Design

Institution: (...) Year: (...)

Main Practice Areas

Painting, visual art, poetry, writing, art direction, conceptual direction, music-related creative direction, cultural storytelling, Sindhi language-based creative work.

Themes in Work

Sindhi language, Indus Valley roots, rural life, memory, identity, climate change, water rights, social justice, marginalized communities, common people, cultural preservation, love, loss, resistance, migration, and belonging.

Selected Exhibitions / Presentations

- Karachi Arts Council, Pakistan — (...)
- Pakistan National Council of Arts, Pakistan — (...)
- Shah Abdul Latif University, Khairpur — (...)
- Khairpur Arts Council, Sindh — (...)
- World Sindhi Congress — 2024
- Sindhi Association of North America, Houston — 2025
- Other exhibitions: (...)

Books / Publications

Sada

Sindhi poetry collection

Published by Sambara Academy, 2002

Melan Chony

Translation of selected poetry of Zahid Rajper

Translated by Qadir Ansari

Published by Sindhi Sangat United Kingdom, 2008

Black Banded Time

Translation of selected poetry of Zahid Rajper

Translated by Ibrahim Khokhar

In publishing process with SCALA Canada

Expected publication year: (...)

Writing and Social Engagement

Zahid Rajper has written on climate change, water rights, and social justice for marginalized communities. During Pakistan's martial law period in the early 2000s, he contributed articles to Khabrain Group, addressing public concerns during a difficult political and social time.

Upcoming U.S. Visit

Zahid Rajper will be visiting the United States in Houston, Texas and Richmond, Virginia in June, July 2026 for gallery meetings, exhibitions, studio visits, artist collaborations, and cultural exchange opportunities.

Contact

Website: <https://zahid-rajper.vercel.app>

Email: (...)

Phone/WhatsApp: (...)

Instagram: (...)

Portfolio link: (...)

Location during U.S. visit: (...)

Artist Statement

My work begins with memory, the memory of land, language, water, people, struggle, and the quiet stories carried by everyday life in Sindh.

I come from Khairpur, a district of Sindh, Pakistan, where culture lives in poetry, music, labor, oral history, rural life, and the resilience of ordinary people. Sindhi language and Indus Valley heritage are central to my creative practice. They are not only cultural references for me; they are living sources of feeling, identity, and resistance.

Through painting, poetry, writing, and visual direction, I explore the emotional and social life of people who are often unseen. My work reflects the struggles of common communities, the dignity of marginalized groups, the pain of displacement, the importance of water, the impact of climate change, and the deep connection between people and land.

For me, art is not separate from society. A painting can carry the weight of a poem. A line of poetry can become an image. A color can hold the memory of a village, a river, a face, or a time of political and social hardship. My work moves between these forms because life itself does not exist in one medium.

I am interested in the place where personal memory becomes collective memory. My practice is a way to preserve, question, and share the stories of Sindh while also connecting them with wider human experiences of loss, hope, justice, and belonging.

Through my work, I hope to create a bridge between Sindh and the world, between local culture and global conversation, between memory and the present, between silence and expression.

Gallery / Studio Introduction Version (for sending with introductory email)

Zahid Rajper is a Pakistani multidisciplinary artist, poet, writer, and art director from Sindh. His practice includes painting, poetry, writing, conceptual direction, and cultural storytelling. Rooted in Sindhi language, Indus Valley heritage, and the lived struggles of ordinary people, his work explores memory, identity, climate change, water rights, rural life, social justice, and the dignity of marginalized communities.

Zahid studied Art & Design and earned a Bachelor of Arts from Shah Abdul Latif University, Khairpur. He has worked as Art Director at Audio Lab Pakistan, contributed to music selection and composition, and worked with Sindh TV in art direction. His work has been exhibited and presented at Karachi Arts Council, Pakistan National Council of Arts, Shah Abdul Latif University Khairpur, Khairpur Arts Council, World Sindhi Congress 2024, and the Sindhi Association of North America in Houston 2025.

He is also a published poet and writer. His Sindhi poetry book Sada was published in 2002, and his selected poetry has been translated and published internationally. During his upcoming visit to the United States, Zahid is seeking opportunities for gallery exhibitions, artist talks, studio collaborations, cultural programs, and cross-cultural creative exchange.

Available for: solo exhibition, group exhibition, studio visit, artist talk, gallery meeting, poetry and visual art program, cultural presentation, workshop, panel discussion, and collaborative art projects.